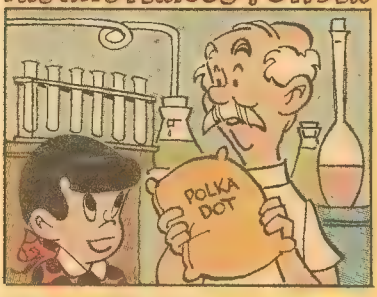
LITTLE DOT'S ADVENTURES

THE MYSTERIOUS POWDER



"What is it," Dot asked with curiosity, "face powder?" She'd said that to tease Uncle Branes, knowing that the world's greatest inventor wouldn't be bothered with mere face powder.

He replied with eyes twinkling mysteriously, "Just stir a teaspoonful into a gallon of paint and see what happens!" He would say no more about it.

Sometime later, after she followed Uncle Branes directions with a can of green paint in the garage, Dot was delighted to hear Mom ask Daddy to paint the living room walls because her Saturday Bridge Club was coming that afternoon. The walls would be dry if he started now.

Daddy grumbled and muttered that every time the bridge club came Mom had no time to make dinner. He was tired of tv dinners! But Daddy had to admit that the living room walls looked shabby, so he went out to the garage to get the green paint, the paint roller and tray.

Dot watched eagerly as he rolled paint onto a wall. She was disappointed when nothing unusual happened at first. But when Daddy started to paint a second wall, Dot was thrilled to see evenly-spaced purple polka dots begin to appear on the pale green wall.

It was lucky she saw them first and anticipated Daddy's reaction, as she was already on her way out of the house when he looked around and saw the green wall with the purple polka dots. Daddy howled.

Dot took her mysterious powder with her as she took a long walk to give Daddy's anger time to simmer down.

"Uncle Branes usually invents things that help people," she mused. "So I'd better take my powder along in case anybody happens to need some polka dot paint!"

It happened sooner than she expected. There was a sign on the lawn, "This House For Sale!" The owner mumbled aloud that nobody was interested in buying his old house, and perhaps a coat of paint might help. The paint was there, on the ground, and when the man went to get his brushes and a ladder, Dot stirred some of her powder into the paint.

Well, even before he noticed that the first side was drying a bright white with purple polka dots, Dot heard someone call out, "I'll pay you fifteen thousand for it—if you paint the whole thing white with purple polka dots!"

"Fifteen thousand!" exclaimed the owner. "I was asking only . . ." Thinking better of it, he didn't say what he had been asking. Suddenly he added, "Purple polka dots? You're kidding."

The man gasped with astonishment as he went around and gaped at the side that had dried. "I'll be darned!" Then he grinned happily, for he knew that this strange thing had sold his house for him.

Dot's amazing powder helped others, too. There was the owner of a small grocery store who was unhappy because a supermarket had taken all his business away. He was complaining loudly about this as he painted his truck, having nothing better to do. Dot put a pinch of powder into his paint spray, and the resulting polka dot paint job attracted so many customers back to his store that he painted the whole place the same way and called it The Polka Dot Market!

Dot really helped the whole town by emptying all of her powder into the cans they were using to paint the outside of the town hall. The purple polka dots on white walls attracted tourists to the city from all over the country.

Finally, Dot decided that she had to face Daddy sometime. She reached home in time to see the members of Mom's club, looking ill and dizzy, leaving. Mom pleaded with them to play bridge in another room, but, as Mrs. Flotsam put it, "All I want to do is go home to bed till I stop seeing purple polka dots!"

"Well!" snapped Mom after the girls had gone and she could be angry with Dad in private. "You did that on purpose!"

"I don't understand it," Daddy said as he sat staring at the wall.

Dot knew it was time to tell the truth and take Daddy off the hook. "It was a powder that Uncle Branes gave me," she said. "But honest, I didn't know it would make purple polka dots!"

Mom threw up her hands in dismay and sighed, "Oh, well, I'll cook a roast for dinner. I have nothing else to do!"

Dot was sure Daddy was going to spank her, but he didn't. He hugged her and promised to take her to a movie that night!

GOLLY, DAD--YOU NEVER KNOW WHAT TROUBLE YOU CAN SAVE JUST BY THINKING THINGS OUT!

Meet the middleweight champ, the Wingfoot "175." Especially made for middleweight bikes with 3-T Nylon cord.

Not a patch in a thousand miles

(No wonder Goodyears are good news to newsboys)

For their Chicago Sun-Times and Tribune, quite a few people in Villa Park, Illinois, depended on Dennis Johnsen. And Dennis, of course, depended on his bike to get the papers delivered on time . . . seven days a week.

So to this 14-year-old businessman, tires were mighty important. The Goodyears he rode on kept him rolling for eighteen months. And in all that time . . . more than a thousand miles . . . they never had to be patched.

Goodyear tires are built with 3-T Process Nylon cord (triple-tempered against road-shock and fatigue). They pack extra resistance to bumps and bruises. And their super-tough treads wear longer, give you better grip, quicker, safer stops.

Whether you have a paper route or not, you'll get more out of your bike if it's equipped with Goodyear tires. Let your dealer help you select the Goodyear that's best for your bike. Goodyear, Cycle Tire Dept., Akron, Ohio 44316.

COFFEE CAPERS

"Here's your milk, son," Mrs. Lane said cheerfully, setting the glass on the table. "And here's your coffee, dear," she told her husband, handing him the cup.

The rich, fragrant steam of the coffee rose from the cup and wafted delicately across Tommy's nose. How he loved the smell of coffee! And how he hated the taste of milk! "I won't drink it!" he said rebelliously, pushing the glass of milk away from his plate. "I want coffee!"

"Coffee!" repeated his father in astonishment. "Don't you think you're a little young for that, son?"

"No, I don't!" Tommy insisted. "I want coffee! I hate milk!"

"That will do, young man!" his mother reproved him. "You won't be at the coffee age for a good many years yet! Now drink your milk like a good boy and stop being silly."

Tommy said no more . . . and he drank the milk . . . but inwardly he was fuming. And an hour later, when dinner was all over and his mother and father were in the living room watching television, he slipped quietly into the kitchen and headed straight for the coffee pot that was simmering on the stove! Quickly and quietly, he poured himself a whole glassful of the hot, dark liquid and drank it all down in one great gulp! It burned his throat, and it tasted much more bitter than he'd expected, but still he was glad he drank it. He'd show his folks he could too be a coffee drinker!

That satisfying sense of secret mischief stayed with him all evening. Even when his mother bundled him off to bed, he was feeling too good to put up his usual argument. It was only after he was alone, with the lights turned out, that his good spirits vanished. Because, unaccountably, he wasn't a bit sleepy . . . and yet his body was very tired after the day's activities. He recalled hearing somewhere that coffee often kept people awake at nights, and that made him feel just a little bit guilty.

Then, suddenly, a huge, shapeless thing loomed out of the darkness of his room. It lifted him up bodily from the bed and carried him out the window, out into the night air, out somewhere into space! Then, before Tommy could catch his breath or cry out, the thing put him down . . . on his feet . . . terrified but unhurt! Wildly, Tommy looked around him. He seemed to be in some kind of an orchard. Yes, it was an orchard . . . a coffee orchard! He could smell the fragrance! And now the coffee beans were falling . . . raining down on him from every side . . . pelting him like hail stones . . . harder and harder. "Help!" Tommy screamed, throwing up his hands to ward off the blows. "Help!"

The sound of his own voice shocked him into awareness. And with a sudden start, he realized he was safe in his own bed at home! Why, it had all been a dream! "I swear," Tommy promised devoutly, "that I'm going to stick to milk for a long time to come! It's safer!"

DIPSY POODLE

"I'm hungry!" shouted Frenchie Poodle. "I'm hungry—and you never give me enough to eat!"

He looked up at his mother with the most appealing brown eyes a French Poodle could have. And Mrs. Poodle returned his glance, and said, "How much can one dog eat?! You've had enough for lunch!"

"Shucks!" Frenchie Poodle muttered to himself. "Lucky I'm not a Police Dog or else I'd starve!"

"Now, you go out and play," Mrs. Poodle told her son with a smile. "I'm sure you'll be home in time for supper!"

Frenchie went dashing down the road, not knowing exectly where he was going, but with one thought still burning in his mind. "Food, meat," he said to his stomach, "I'm still hungry!"

The dog walked for awhile, and then suddenly he saw a sign. "To the Zoo," the wooden marker said, and an arrow pointed straight ahead.

"Hey!" laughed Frenchie. "What an idea! They should be feeding the animals now, and if I could sneak myself into a cage, I could eat a day's full!"

His eyes lit up now, with a brilliant glow of promise. "Boy," he said, "when they dish out the meat to those animals, they sure dish out the meat!"

His mind was reeling with thoughts of huge chunks of meat. Red meat! Juicy meat! Luscious meat!

"Oh, let me at that zoo!" he shouted, and he was off.

But getting into a cage was going to be the hard part. And Frenchie Poodle soon found that out. He stood before the lion's cage for ten minutes, and no one bothered him. But when he tried to get just his paw in, he almost lost his head! A guard promptly threw him out on his ear!

Frenchie found the same results at the seal pond, the tiger's cage, and even in the monkey house.

But Frenchie was a pretty smart Poodle, and seeing he couldn't get in through the front of the cage, he tried the back.

Slowly, cautiously, slyly he worked his way in and hid himself in a corner. He couldn't see what animal lived there, but his mind suggested gorilla, rhino, elephant! "I'll even settle for a leopard!" Frenchie decided.

Then he heard the voice. "OK, boys," it said. "Here's your lunch!"

BANG! The food fell into the cage.

"Wasn't much of a bang," thought Frenchie, "but any meat will meet with my approval!" Frenchie figured he'd have to settle on a monkey's lunch, as he turned his head into the front portion of the cage and saw . . .

"Carrots! A rabbit's cage!" he screamed disgustedly. "And if there's anything I hate, it's carrots!"

There was only one thing for Frenchie Poodle to do. That was to climb out of the cage and patiently wait for . . . supper! And that's just what he did.

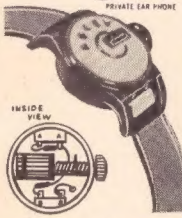
WRIST RADIO

RECEIVES BROADCASTS UP TO 50 MILES WITH ATTACHED ANTENNA
WEAR IT LIKE A WATCH
LISTEN IN LIKE A RADIO



Wow! A wrist radio like the one used by the famous detective character that really works. Yes, imagine receiving broadcasts up to about 50 miles, using the antenna attachment. Without attaching the antenna lead-in clip (which is included), to a substantial antenna such as the dial stop on a telephone, reception is limited to a few miles. Think what fun it will be to have your own personal wrist radio that actually permits you to listen to your own programs without disturbing others, and there are no batteries, no tubes—nothing to wear out. Makes detective and battle games seem more real, pretending to transmit messages, and getting help in the nick of time. Complete with private earphone.
